DIANE SANSEVERE-DREHER is the author of three juvenile biographies in the Changing Our World series (Bantam Books): Barbara Bush, Benazir Bhutto, and Stephen Biko. She lives in Pennsylvania with her husband and four children.

Each chapter discusses a different explorer in GREAT detail. We read about 3 of the explores in the same week, and some of the information was repeated in several stories. For example the reason sailors feared sailing farther south down the coast of Africa. So if you choose to read only one story from the book, you still get all of the important information.

We used this book for a home schooling project for our grade three son while we crossed the Pacific ocean in our sailboat. I found it to be full of information given the size of the book, with many interesting observations about different explorers. I chose it because it covered not only the top few best known explorers but went a level more to cover a wide breadth of explorers. The book is a little sparse on illustrations but given the facts packed into each chapter, we were very pleased with this as a one-volume resource.- Nadine Slavinski, author of Lesson Plans Ahoy

I was hoping for something a bit different from this book. I wanted a narrative about explorers who got lost to use with my children in our home school. This book is a bit beyond our need for detail at this time though. I did hope for portrait style drawings and more pictorial details about the travels taken by explorers. The information is there and accurate, but backing it up with some maps and non-cartoon images would improve this book's flexibility (skip the words, use the pictures as a tool). I'll keep my copy around for a few years and see if it gets more love when we revisit European exploration when the children are older.

My students enjoy reading about the different explores in this book. They think it's funny how these famous people got lost during their explorations.

Really cute book. We used it as a supplement to learning about early explorers.

Awesome history resource!

My kids LOVED this book. Fun and very informative! Highly recommend.

This book was awesome. My kids loved to hear about the adventures, and risks that the explorers had to take. It provided a great opportunity to have them find places on our world map. They not only became familiar with important people in history, but also became familiar with the geography of the world. Great book. I highly recommend it.
