My 10 year old loved this book and will enjoy the next ones as well!

I think my grandchildren will really enjoy this book.....I did!

Jonah (Joe) Johnson is an eleven- year- old whose life has just been turned upside down. His mother lost her job in Orlando so they have moved to his deceased grandmother's old house in rural Alabama. On the first day in school, Joe is confronted by a bully who demands that Joe write his homework assignment. Things go from bad to worse when the tax collector appears and informs them that the property taxes are overdue and the county would be foreclosing. Now they will need to move into his Uncle Mike's house. When Joe goes outside he discovers a fox in the hen house, not any old fox but a talking fox! Joe and Fox become fast friends, but not before Fox causes all sorts of mayhem as Joe desperately tries to think of ways to help his mother, face the bully and maintain his friend relationship with Fox. This fantasy tale is written well with lots of authentic dialogue and humor. Middle- grade students will find lots to love. There are cute cartoon- like drawings of the characters interspersed with the text. Blaze touches on issues important to students in this age group. The tale is an easy read that is under one hundred pages which makes it appealing to reluctant readers. Highly recommended for eight to twelve- year- olds, and adults who are willing to listen to a talking fox.

Fantastic book for this age group. My granddaughter loved it! I have already bought the next book.

My 7 year old daughter absolutely loved this book. She could not put it down! In her own words "it was funny and the end was great".

My daughter, who is ten years old, reads a book a month and said this was the best book she has ever read. She can't wait for the next book by David Blaze.

A very entertaining book. My 3 yr old granddaughter loves hearing the story and can't wait to hear more. Thank you "David Blaze".
