Very nice item, even better than pictured.

good reference book...has all the styles, some relevant some not, the setting techniques could be more detailed but its a clear reference that can do a good show and tell for designers.

I ordered this book to get information regarding hairstyles of the 1940's. It gave a great deal of information but not regarding the hairstyle that I was really interested in. It did have a lot of detailed information to created waved and other popular styles of the 1940's. It was a fun read and I do plan to utilize the information given.

Loved the book.....Instruction and pictures are great. Easy to follow.......The book had a lot of hairstyles to choose from to do.

As a complete novice, this is a great handbook. I'm attending a vintage hairstyling course and thought it would be a great book to take along. It's full of diagrams and ideas which are really useful. Fot the price it's a really good buy.

"Creative Hair Styling" is a hairdressing manual for beauty students written by award-winning hairstylist Alfred Morris in 1948. The many illustrations are by Esme Limberg, a tutor at Mr. Morris' beauty school in London. The is the most complete and most clearly illustrated book I've seen on 1940s hairstyles, though it lacks detailed instructions on how to cut the hair, beyond that the cut needs to be tapered. The styles appear to be for hair that is tapered on the sides and front and falls to just below the jawline in the back. To create the styles, you will need a comb, setting lotion, and lots of hair pins to hold pin curls. And water and patience. The organization of the book is loose in that there are 22 chapters that should be divided into 3 sections for clarity, but they are not. After a few introductory chapters on preparing the hair, the book presents the basic techniques you will need to master: pin curling and water-waving. Morris gives detailed instructions with illustrations for pin curling and presents 4 examples of styles created with pin curls, also with instructions. Next, he illustrates how to create a basic water wave and presents 5 variations on the water wave style, which vary the number of "dips" on the forehead and the location of the part, with instructions. Morris regards water-waving with setting combs as an outdated method, made obsolete by the heavier setting creams that were available in the 1940s, but he includes a chapter on how to do it anyway. He ends the instructions on water-waving with advice on how to dry the hair, normally under a hood, but you can use a hand dryer in a pinch. By this point, you are at chapter 9, where the lessons on "hair designing" begin. Morris breaks the hairstyles of the day down into "Twelve Basic Principles". These are basic elements of the styles. Both the setting and the finished style are illustrated, with instructions. All elements consist of waves and pin curls. You combine elements for the sides, top, and back to create the hairstyle of your choice. The illustrations are exceptionally clear. You can see exactly how these styles are created. Morris is concerned with the stylist's ability to suit the hairstyle to the client's face, so he then gives examples of correct and incorrect styles for different shapes of faces, necks, noses, shoulders, foreheads, chins, you name it. Now you've reached chapter 15, where Morris speaks briefly about using postiche (hair pieces) in modern (1940s) styles. Done with the postiche, he goes on to give instructions, with illustrations of the setting and final style, for 4 popular styles of the time -the cockscomb, the bang, the sideswirl, side-swept "v" roll, and the page boy- with variations. Then he does the same for 11 more styles, which seem to be evening styles, as they are upswept, with names like "trÃ"s chic", "prestige", "aspiration", "olympia", and "soir de bal". What's impressive is that you actually can figure out how to create these styles, from setting to dressing (combing) out. The illustrations are excellent. "Creative Hair Styling" was written for hairstylist. You could not do these styles on yourself. They require tapered hair that isn't too long, but if you have bangs but no layers or tapers, you could do a bit of pin curling at the bangs and ends and come up with a vaguely `40s look. I'm wondering if the waving cannot be done with a Marcel iron and the pin curling with a very small-barreled iron, so you wouldn't have to work with wet hair and heavy setting lotion. You might get a good approximation with those tools, but the "dips" on the forehead seem difficult to achieve with an iron and without singeing the victim. In any case, "Creative Hair Styling" is the ideal manual for stylists who need to create 1940s hair styles for film or stage.

I will agree with another reviewer when they say this book is really for a hairstylist, and not just someone looking to put their hair up in a new style for dinner tomorrow. However, that said, I read through the book as someone with no training other than I have hair and it was fascinating. The author gets in depth with extensive drawings of exactly how to pin waves and make curls and even gets into things like appropriate styles for face shapes. I took this book to my hairstylist and she found it really interesting as well. She added this info to her own knowledge and made my hair into a great 40s style. This isn't a book to flip through and look at pretty styles - there are better books for that. This is a very detailed how-to with hand drawn sketches throughout. If you want the details, this is it!

As a vintage stylist I love this book for many reasons. It's amazing for reference, it's detailed instructions on the setting and comb outs, and for looking back at the master work of a hair dressing genius. As a cosmetology teacher I love this as a historical account so my students can see what was done and how it's done and see which methods they prefer when styling the hair. Those of yesterday or today. Now if your not a stylist you may find this hard to understand or use. If your a student or a novice stylist this may be a little difficult as well in less you ask for help from a teacher or a fellow more seasoned co worker.
