"Evaluating Books' will be an eye-opener for most homeschooling parents. Written in an easy-to-follow format, parents will become much more aware of the slant of many texts and will be able to teach their children to be even more discerning. Christian parents should be particularly interested in Mr. Maybury's ideas as he strongly advocates return to laws of a higher power rather than government laws. --Martha Robinson, Reviewer for HomeschoolChristian.com"

Richard J. Maybury, also known as Uncle Eric, is a world renowned author, lecturer, and geopolitical analyst. He consults with business firms in the U.S. and Europe. Maybury is the former Global Affairs editor of "Moneyworld" and widely regarded as one of the finest free-market writers in America. Mr. Maybury's articles have appeared in "The Wall Street Journal," "USA Today," and other major publications. Richard J. Maybury has penned eleven books in the Uncle Eric series. His books have been endorsed by top business leaders including former U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon, and he has been interviewed on more than 250 radio and TV shows across America. He is truly a teacher for all ages.

I have continued to read Mr. Maybury's books and the first five have filled me with knowledge and wonder at how uninformed I have been in the past about simple and basic issues that touch, influence and determine the course of a person's life each and every day. I have learned a great deal from his obvious intellectual prowess and his all encompassing views on many subjects and how they mesh together to form, affect and manipulate this world we live in. One gets a sense of awe at how little they can trust those in power but how immensely important it is that those without it stick together and ensure we be ever vigilante in our observations of elected officials. Those people we used to call public servants but who have become nothing but self-indulgent life-long politicians. In other words they have become exactly what our Constitution and Bill of Rights were designed to prevent. In this book, "What Would Thomas Jefferson Think About This?" I have found yet another source of knowledge that I must thank Uncle Eric for. Yet after reading the great book "John Adams." I do not find that I have the awe and inspiration that allows me to make Jefferson my number one hero. Yes, he is a great man and I believe he was one of the greatest founders, however I find that I still place him behind George Washington and Adams on that account. It is my philosophy just like it was Reverend Johathan Mayhew's and John Adam's that "The people, are required to obey their government's law only when it is in agreement with Higher Law. And if the government violates that charge, it is our duty, and we are bound to fight it with every resource at our disposal." In a related topic Mayhew was a true Reverend, and it is unfortunate that the term has been turned into such a blasphemous title today for those who use and claim the name are anything but Reverend. In any case this 6th book in Mr. Maybury's series is yet another collector's item and gives the reader a sound foundation by which to judge the literature they choose to absorb and contemplate in creating their own ideological awareness and positions of items of critical importance to our country and our people.

Excellent

I originally skipped buying this book when I purchased most of the Uncle Eric series, but I think it is one of the best. Maybury makes economics and economic history very understandable with his unique, non-statist view of the world.
