There is nothing new under the sun - that is definitely true with church history. Many of the same issues and problems face us today that faced the medieval church. So not only does this book give a good, fast-paced narrative through early christian history - it also highlights some of the mistakes and problems that have raised their heads again today. (Catherine MacKenzie ~ Author and CF4K Editor) This is a great overview of Church history -- and a sobering look at the cost of following Christ in the early days of the church. While written for the youth market, I found it very readable as an adult. I've given copies to several friends with children and all are enjoying it. (Parent of a Young Reader)My daughter tore through these books and can't wait for the next ones to come out. I finally wised up and read the first one this summer. A fine balance of history and personality. It made the ancient church come alive. How grateful I am to be in the same family of faith as these fallible believers. As a pastor I think this should be required reading for seminary students. Thanks Withrows for writing this series! (Parent of a Young Reader)

We love this serie, we read it as a family and it's easy to understand for the kids. Sometimes the dialog is a little bit forced and strained, but having dialogs help the kids really picture the history of it all and understand the fact that these names belong to real people, who did exist.

great for discussion in our homeschool and family, in which we are trying to really teach about redemptive history, a biblical worldview, and the direction of the church today

My 8 year old son and I read this series together and we both learned a lot.

This fifth book in the series was my favorite of them all. They are smartly written and don't necessarily go for the most well known people of our time. I love how it is not totally American focused and spreads the stories over the globe with variety of characters, missions and lives. I love the whole series, but what a great book to inspire and enlighten our children about the Church and it's history.
